

The Safe Surfin' Foundation works to educate the public about Internet crimes against children and how communities can protect their children from becoming victims.

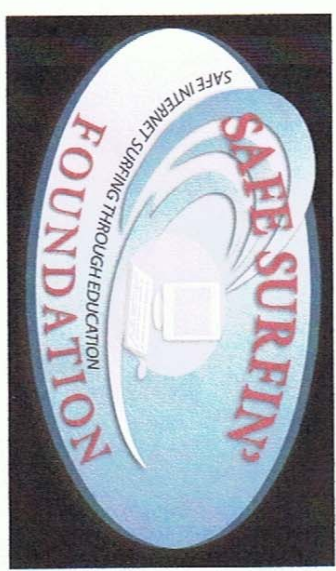

The best way to ensure the safety of millions of children who use the Internet each day is through education - being informed about the problem and learning ways to keep children free from harm.

The Safe Surfin' Foundation provides parents, teachers and school administrators, law enforcement, community groups and librarians with the information and resources necessary to keep children safe from harm.
